Who are we?

Good Night Out Campaign is on a mission for safer nightlife. We believe nights out should be about freedom not fear. We help venues, bars, pubs, clubs, and festivals to better understand, respond to and prevent sexual harassment and assault in their spaces. We have worked with hundreds of licensed premises, including festivals and universities across the UK and beyond. We partner with charities like Drinkaware and councils who count on us to provide accessible and effective training to local managers, bar staff and security. Our team has a varied professional background in frontline sexual violence prevention work, facilitation and music venue management.

What is Good Night Out accreditation?

GNO accreditation is offered to licensed premises that work to our best practice policy, display our posters and undertake specialist workplace training. This is a package offered for a one-off fee which includes ongoing support for up to a year. We undertake similar work with festivals and event organisers. We tailor what we do because we know every business has different requirements.

Why is this important?

The scale of the problem is huge. Inappropriate comments, unwanted touching or groping were experienced by 79% of women and 26% of men on nights out in a 2017 YouGov survey. Shame and blame adds to the harm caused, so those who experience this rarely report it. Staff often feel unclear on their responsibilities under licensing law when working in premises without a procedure to address what is often criminal behaviour. A consistent response to all complaints helps create what we call an 'accountable' environment, where perpetrators proven to be less likely harass or assault due to the clear consequences. Upholding a shared expectation of acceptable standards of behaviour in your space creates a reputation for safety. This is good for your license and good for your bottom line, as well contributing to the broader social change we all want to see!
